Tilicho Lake trek [4919 meters]

Overview

One of the highest lake treks in Nepal, the Tilicho Lake trek is situated in the Manang district and elevated to a height of 4919 meters. The journey to Tilicho Lake, the highest lake in the world, offers spectacular scenery of the Himalayas, lush green slopes, expansive meadows, and traditional Buddhist communities. It is regarded as one of the most challenging trekking destinations on the Annapurna Circuit because of its distant location in the Annapurna region. Trekkers should be in great physical condition as it is known for their difficult and dangerous treks.

This trek provides the most promising opportunity to explore hidden natural and cultural aspects of the Annapurna region.

On this trek, trekkers can experience a diversity of naturally beautiful landscapes that appeal to the eye and capture the attention of every trekker. Additionally, you get to enjoy the beautiful panorama of the majestic mountains, including Annapurna, Dhaulagiri, Machhapuchhre, Nilgiri, and Himchuli, as well as gorgeous landscapes, revered temples, vibrant monasteries, mani walls, and Gompas.

Itinerary

Day 1: Drive from Pokhara to Besisahar (760m / 2492 ft) and Drive to Jagat (1,300m / 4,265ft)

The journey starts with a 4–5-hour bus or jeep ride from Pokhara to Besisahar, the central location of the Lamjung District and the starting point for the trek. We depart from Besisahar and continue on the path to Pam Khola before climbing into the town of Denauti, where we will get a close-up look at the Lamjung people's traditional way of life. The Gurung village of Bhulbhule, which is roughly three hours' driving from Besisahar, is reached as the trail crosses the Khudi Khola. To enter the trailhead at Bhulbhule, you must register your permits at the checkpoint. We can see the Marshyangdi Khola and the rough hills once we arrive at the quiet town of Jagat, a former trading hub.
